JUROR IN CALF CASE RODE THE 'EXHIBIT'

Animal Was Awarded to Claimant, Who Said He Had Trained It.

Muskogee, Okla.—Louis Wassenhaug, a juror in the Superior court, went down into a lot adjoining the courtroom and rode a bull calf just to prove that he was broken to ride, and upon this evidence the jury decided the case after five times the calf's value had been spent in litigation over it.

The property in dispute was a Jersey bull calf which was born on a cold night and its ears were frozen off. Later through the pink eye route it acquired white spots in its eyes. The calf was owned by F Lewis It

strayed away and was picked up on the range by Will Hill, who had lost a calf and believed it was his property Lewis replevined the calf and the case was taken to the courts

Lewis and his witnesses declared the calf had been brought up a pet and the Lewis boy had broken it to ride. Judge McCain ordered the calf brought to court as an exhibit So the calf was brought in, a distance of ten miles After the juror rode the calf the jury returned a verdict in Lewis' favor and he took the pet back to his ranch

NEW NEWS OF YESTERDAY

Story of a Pair of Most Remarkably Keen Eyes.

Captain Leslie Coombe Bruce, Famous Marksman, Read Time on Metropolitan Tower Clock When Nearly Six Miles Away

By E J EDWARDS

Capt Leslie Coombe Bruce, who died recently after a brief illness which was presumably caused by his exposure to the sun while playing golf on one of the hot wave days of early July, gained a world wide reputation ten years ago as the captain of the American rifle team which won the international trophy at the match held at Ildley Ireland He also enjoyed a high reputation as a rifle shot having at one time held the championship of the American Rifle association And he was noted among his friends and acquaintances for possessing a pair of eyes that were eagle like in their ability to distinguish clearly at great distance objects that were literally invisible to the ordinary eye

I once asked Captain Bruce if he had ever had any training in the matter of accustoming his eyes to distances and points in such manner as to take accurate measurement of them

'No,' he replied, I never needed any instruction of that kind Of course, I had to learn how to use wind gauges and various sorts of apparatus which are employed by long distance marksmen But even when I was a boy in Kentucky I was able to see far beyond the range of vision of any of my mates and to see accurately They used to test me by putting up little objects a mile or more away upon a tree or wall and I never failed the test I suppose that it's some native quality of the eye which has always enabled me to meet like tests I have been told by oculists that while they have been unable to detect by any of their instruments any difference between my eyes and those of the average man yet there must be some difference—a difference located perhaps in the nerve

One of the most amusing experiences of the many that I have had when friends were trying to test my eyesight and catch me in a trap occurred when I was returning one morning to New York city from a short visit to the country home on Long Island of one of my most intimate friends

"The great clock in the Metropolitan tower had been set going only a few weeks earlier My friend brought me in his automobile to the city, and as we were traveling between Jamaica and Long Island City I said to him

Why don't you set your automobile clock right? It is twenty minutes slow'

'How do you know that?' he replied 'You haven't looked at your watch'

'No, but I see the clock on the Metropolitan tower and the hands are now pointing to ten minutes to nine while your clock reads half past eight.'

"'You can't see the clock on that tower, my friend replied Why we are nearly six miles away, and I can only just make out the top of the tower itself'

" I do see the clock and the hands I said They point to ten minutes to nine Now you may bet me. We will see how long it takes to run in from this point to the Blackwell's Island bridge, where it is easy for any one who is not near-sighted to read the Metropolitan tower clock Then you will see whether I am right or not'

When we were upon the Blackwell's Island bridge my friend told me that he could see the hands upon the clock They pointed to ten minutes past nine The hands upon his automobile clock pointed to ten minutes to nine. My friend looked at me in astonishment

"'Your eyes must be like a telescope' he exclaimed And I told him that others had made that remark"

HINTS ON BEAUTY

Care of the Ears Important to Women Who Caree for Her Looks.

Aside from the beauty-point of view the ears should be well cared for. A dull sense of hearing is usually after the expression of the ears, and the outward condition of the ears themselves is important to the woman who cares for her looks.

When an insect gets into one's ear it is almost impossible to prevent pain, but this is really uncalled for. The bitter wax in the ear usually kills the insect out again. A little water may be dropped into the ear while the head is held sidewise, the insect will wash harmlessly out when the head is turned again.

The ears are too pale circulation is encouraged by frequent gentle rubbings and pullings.

On the other hand, the ears are not they must not be handled. Powder with French chalk will remove the redness and give them a refined appearance.

This is the time to cultivate beautiful ears in childhood. If the ears stand too far from the head the brush over the ears at night or have caps, which hold the ears against the skull, yet permit the free ventilation it requires.

TO HAVE SHAPELY SHOULDERS

Easy Exercises That Will Improve Woman's Figure—Things to Be Avoided.

There are things that make the shoulders look irregular and that robs them of their grace.

One of these is to sit with one hand upon the hip. It destroys the line of beauty.

Another is to lift or shrug the shoulders; nothing else so distorts them.

A third thing that is very disconcerting to the shoulders is to sit unevenly upon a chair, resting one shoulder only against it.

Easy exercises for making the shoulders graceful are these:

Walk for five minutes each day with the hands clasped back of the neck.

Hold the chin straight upward; throw back the elbows. Then lower the elbows and let the hands lie in the palms still with the chin held up in the air.

Walk in the open air with the shoulders thrown back. It is an excellent thing for the figure.

A SMART VISITING GOWN

The skirt is built in the new finely corded velveteen, having a gray satin and black stripe and trimmed with black silk braid and fringe. The coat hat is of gray satin, with black ostrich plumes.

Trimming of Roses.

Many new gowns of brocade, of lace, are touched off at the waist line with flamenco satin rose in a brilliant color. These roses solve the problem of color combinations with ease and skill, and the American woman should follow the prevailing fashion of using them wherever possible.

A French manufacturer, for instance, is making single American beauty roses with long stems that are so true to nature that the observer is fairly fooled. One of the faultless roses is pinned on the bodice of an evening gown and is often worn on the lapel of a coat when dark furs are worn. The French women also pin roses on the fur muff, which is an attractive idea.

To Whip on Lace.

To whip lace on a garment without showing the edge of the material, place the lace nearly one-fourth of an inch from the raw edge of the material and whip neatly. This will roll the material a neat and even hem which will wear and wash as well as if hemmed separately. This is particularly satisfactory for bias or circular

POULTRY

BUILDING A SHIPPING CRATE

To Get Correct Proportion and Still Make It Light Is Matter Requiring Thought and Experimenting.

To build a strong shipping crate in the correct proportion and still make it light in weight is a matter that can not be carried out without some thought and experimenting and for this reason I have drawn plans and built sample crates in an experimental way until the result is satisfactory to me, and I feel sure will be to those who wish to build crates after this pattern, writes H. F. Barry, in the Successful Farming.

Poultry Shipping Crate.

The drawing will give a correct idea of how to put the crates together and the following lumber bills will if followed give correct results.

The material, if a person is to use any number of these crates of a certain size he can best go to a box factory or mill and have them cut to order.

The long stock should consist of boards any length six inches wide by three-eighths inch thick to be used for bottom. Slats any length three inches wide by three-eighths inch thick. Frame stock any length three inches wide by three-fourths inch thick. Common stock spruce surfaced two sides.

It will be found desirable to make three sizes of these crates of a suitable height for broilers and fryers and at least two sizes for mature fowl and for turkeys.

METHOD OF KILLING FOWLS

Neat and Proper Way Is to Clip Head Off of Bird and Place It in Box to Bleed Freely.

The following method of killing fowls is a neat and proper one: Set a square post about two feet in the ground and about two and one-half or three feet (or as desired) above ground, writes J. B. Reber in the Farm and Fireside. After clipping the fowl's head off (for this I prefer a corn-cutter or knife to a hatchet or ax), place the fowl in the box, where it will bleed freely. This method, to my notion, is more humane than to have them flopping about on the ground.

POULTRY NOTES

Gather eggs daily.

The profits in poultry culture are measured by the care given.

It is useless to expect many eggs from old fowls of any variety.

All scraps of vegetables from the table should be given to the hens.

A poultryman is judged by his surroundings and the condition of his fowls.

Hens need to be provided with a summer dust bath as well as in the winter.

Grit enables the gizzard to prepare the food for digestion. It is a fowl's false teeth.

The dropping-boards should be regularly cleaned and the filth removed from the house.

It is of little profit to have a good supply of eggs if we cannot market them to advantage.

A large part of the heavy loss from bad eggs can be obviated by the production of infertile eggs.

The market age of goslings is twelve weeks, which is a short time after they have feathered out.

Chickens are creatures of habit. Whether they are lazy or active depends largely on the way they are raised.

The enemies of the fresh egg market are the preserved and the tested out incubator eggs. Be above such trickery.

Guinea fowls do not mate in pairs like pigeons or doves. One male to several fowls is the proper way to mate them.

At the present day many poultrymen grind part of their chicken feed into a meal so it can be fed into either a dry or wet mash.

Any breed of hens will consume an enormous quantity of feed before commencing to lay, but after having once begun will not require so much grain as before.

THE FEMININE JURY.

The beautiful young prisoner entered the box in her own behalf.

"What is your age, miss?" asked the lawyer.

"Forty-eight," was the steady reply.

The feminine jury caught its breath with an audible little gasp and sat there rigid.

"How much did you pay for the hat you are wearing?"

"Ninety-eight cents."

"Are you guilty of the crime that is charged against you?"

"No."

Thus did the wily prisoner attempt to establish her veracity and then convince the jury that she was innocent. But don't forget that this was a jury of women. A verdict of incurable insanity was brought in.

Golf Sausages.

Sausages are growing in favor in this city and one West Philadelphia woman who has just grown fond of them was talking with a neighbor.

"Did you ever try those that come without skins; the kind you buy by the pound?" the neighbor asked.

"Oh, dear, no, and I don't think I shall," the other answered. "Jim is such a golf fiend I'm sure he wouldn't eat any kind of sausage except those that come in links."

TOO BAD.

Mr. Hinckly—I'm not going to church any more until they get a new minister.

Mrs. Hinckly—Don't you like the present preacher's sermons?

Mr. Hinckly—Oh! yes; but he talks so loud that he wakes you up.

Ancient Fees.

With happy heart to trip along
An ever-blooming way
Few mortals can, but still with song
In Trouble kept at bay.

No Sale.

Mrs. Irving—You didn't buy that oriental rug after all, did you?

Mrs. Clint—No; we took a friend of George's to see it and he said that, while it was a genuine Bokhara, beautifully woven and all that, it wouldn't last more than a hundred years, so we decided to look further."

Some Difference.

Flypp—I see that a woman who wore men's clothes for years has been declared insane.

Blypp—Yes, and any man who would wear women's clothes might count on being in the asylum before the week was up.

Just Like Canada.

"Tom, what is reciprocity?"

"It's this way, Mabel. I give you a hug and you give me a kiss. That's reciprocity. Will you do it?"

"I fear it might lead to annexation and I don't know that I am prepared for that."

Why He Left.

"Why did you leave that swell boarding house?"

"Because the swellness was at the expense of the food supply."

"What do you mean?"

"Four kinds of forks and two kinds of vegetables."

'Chawklats 'n' bonbons! Marsh mellows!"

"Wake up, Henry! You're snoring and everybody in the house is looking at you."

"Hello! Is that Dr Gurney? This is Miss Twimley. Sorry to disturb your nap, doctor, but was it every hour of every two hours that I was to give Dickey that medicine?"

"Want to take a look at Saturn, mister? Only a nickel"

"B-r-r-r! Darn that janitor!"

Sometimes Counted Out

A Cincinnati man who visited New York not long ago was presented to "Big" Tim Sullivan of Tammany fame. It happened that in the course of the conversation that ensued between the westerner and Big Tim the former quoted the old saying "Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

Big Tim smiled in a superior way. "I suppose that's right, my friend," he said, "but sometimes not before the referee has counted ten.—Lippincott's.

Optimistic, Very.

He always wore a cheerful smile
And made his neighbors think
That he was happy all the while,
Even when up to the brink

Unreasonable.

He—So your father thought I want ed to marry you for your money, did he?

She—Yes, and when I explained that you didn't care a snap about money he said that you must be a fool, then.—Varieties Life.

Some Things Worse.

"This thing of getting married," said the girl who was busy with her trousseau, "is certainly a trial."

"A trial, yes," agreed the cynical bachelor, "but it isn't half so bad as working out the sentence."—Town Topics.

Farmyard Philosophy.

Black Orp, Senior—Ah, my boy, there is nothing stronger than a mother's love.

Young Black Orp—Isn't there, by Jove! Have you ever had a peek at one of those mulons?—Tatler.

An Eye-Opener.

She—What fine large eyes Edith's husband has.

He—I never noticed it. You must have been present when he received her dressmaker's bill.

Groundless Fear.

"When she sings she puts her soul in it."

"She opened her mouth so wide I was afraid she might put her foot in it."

A SAD MISTAKE.

Mrs Mosquito—How dare you come home in that disgraceful condition!

Hubby Mosquito—Couldn't help it m dear. I didn't know the gen'leman was from Kentucky.
